This posting supersedes the one of 25th April.

indeed please send me any corrections or additions.

In my capacity as the editor of this collection I have no

We recently operated special event station OE1XRW/IMD and received about three hundred letters for a direct QSL. About a third of them with neither an IRC nor a greenstamp, About twenty letters with more than 1$ or more than one IRC, the rest with either 1$ or 1 IRC. Air Mail from Austria to the USA costs about 1,50$, to Japan about 2$. IRCs can be "cashed in" for a stamp worth 60 Cents. We spent more than 200$ to deliver direct QSLs. Are we "greedy" ?

No, of course you are not. Note that the original question was about mail from the US to Europe, not the other way around. My point was that it costs a W manager 50c to mail a letter, so a dollar represents a significant profit to a US manager.

What I and probably most managers do if someone sends a card with no $$, IRCs or stamps is to return a card via the bureau. I am amazed that you received one-third of the requests with no $$/IRCs, I receive perhaps 2% without $$/IRCs.

Managers in countries where the mail is so expensive can reduce their costs by bulk mailing letters to the US with 29c stamps on, and having a friendly W do the mailings. Some European managers do this routinely. For mailings to non-US, some managers mail all their cards from a neighboring country with lower postal rates.

Any ideas how/where to mount a mobile 2-meter radio in a 1994 Toyota rig, with the center console as it is. Unless that area directly underneath the radio could be worked.

Thanks in advance.

Sure, pull the diode you have and the set will run through its full range. The TS450 is the same. I also have the mod page from some book which mis-identifies this diode. Pulled it just to see and away it went. I put the diode back in (I have no reason to be outside the ham bands).

When I moved here to Singapore, I found out what the other holes are for. Our ham bands are not quite the same as those in Canada/US. The regulators in various countries take a dim view of ham gear that is capable of operating outside the ham bands.

After a quick trip to the Kenwood dealer, he installed another diode (sorry did not note which one of the empty spots he used) and magic - the radio now only transmits on the bands authorised for this part of the world.

Now, as a retired regulator, what is it you are going to do with that radio once you get it to transmit out of band? . . . ;->

Something I noticed yesterday, when I was wondering why my fist sounds like hell compared to when I was 'into' CW (I was one of those whom they asked 'you mean that's NOT a keyer?!?').

My Argonaut 509 had a piercing side-tone which was loud regardless of receive volume, and quiet T/R gear.

My TR7's sidetone tends to be just below the R/X volume, with clattery T/R, if I adjust it so I at least hear the frequency between words.

Ergo, I found my brain shutting off much of the time while sending, and found that I WASN'T LISTENING TO WHAT I WAS SENDING! Oops. Can't do that with a straight key.

As soon as I started listening to the music I was playing again, it began once again to sound more like a reel than a Morris dance. So... ..obvious as it may sound... listen to what you're sending.
